ABANDON SIEGE OF BLUEFIELDS

General Lara's Army Routed In Final Assault.

YANKEE GUNNERS TURN TRICK

Wait Until Straggling Remnant of Madriz Army Approaches to Within Stone's Throw of Entrenchments, Then Let Loose Broadside From Rapid-Fire Guns—Insurgents Leap From Trenches and Put Finishing Touches to the Flight.

Bluefields, June 2.—General Lara, beaten in every attack he directed against the enemy, his forces decimated by bullets and disease, is leading what remains of the Madriz government's army south to its base of supplies at Rama. The retreat, which almost amounted to a wild rout, began after Lara had sent his discouraged army at the Estrada trenches in front of Bluefields in a last desperate effort to recoup the defeats of the last two weeks. There was only one charge. Lara's forces rushed Estrada's earthworks. They were allowed to come almost within a stone's throw, when the American gunners turned loose their field guns on the charging soldiers.

The first fire threw Lara's troops into confusion, and as they wavered a second charge and flight, the Estrada soldiers clambered from their trenches and charged into the frightened enemy. Fighting of the fiercest sort ensued. It was knife against knife, gun-butt against gun-butt, until, beaten beyond hope of recovering, the Madriz troops fled from the field, leaving scores of dead and wounded, while many were taken prisoners.
